I. Course Description

This course is designed to enable students to better understand North Korean politics and foreign policy. Toward such ends, students will acquire knowledge about (1) Historical development of North Korean politics under Kim Il Sung and Kim Jong Il regime (2) Kim Jong Il’s death and power succession to Kim Jong Un; (3) North Korea's foreign relations with major powers; and (4) prospects for the future of North Korea.

Understanding North Korea is critical for students of international relations with a focus on East Asia and the Korean Peninsula. It became more so due to Kim Jong Il's sudden death in December 2011. While the course is going to cover the rise to power of Kim Il Sung and his son and 3rd hereditary power transition to Kim Jong Un, we will also analyze the inter-Korean relations and North Korea’s foreign relations with key regional powers such as the United States, China, Japan and Russia. Given the reclusive nature of North Korea, however, discerning change is always a challenge. It is hoped that students who take this class will be able to have a better grasp of the nature of the North Korean regime, its foreign policy, and contrasting future scenarios.

The course is mainly divided into three parts. The first part put focus on the politics of North Korea. Independence activities under the Japanese colonial rule are first traced to have background knowledge of state-build up and power struggle in North Korea since National Liberation in 1945. Against this backdrop, this class overviews historical evolution of Kim Il Sung’s power consolidation, Kim Jong Il’s politics and the emergence of Kim Jong Un. In doing so, consolidation of political leadership, power elites, political ideology, and control over society are closely examined.
The second part of the class is devoted to North Korea’s foreign policy. Diplomacy has played an important role for political regime resilience and economic survival. It seems that North Korea attempts to achieve core national interests by nuclear diplomacy. The second part consists of overview of North Korea’s foreign policy, investigation into the five pairs of bilateral relations (inter-Korean, North Korea-the United States, China, Japan, Russia), and in-dept analysis of North Korea’s nuclear diplomacy. Discussions on explanatory factors of foreign policy are conducted.

Last part of the class is preoccupied with forecasting politics and foreign policy of North Korea after Kim Jong Il’s death. The structure of crisis in North Korea is explored as a starting point of forecasting. The crisis structure is characterized by a vicious cycle of crisis, including elements of policy environment (internal and external environments), policy response, and policy performance. Student is strongly encouraged to participate in discussion.

II. Grading and Assignments

Students are strongly urged to read the required reading materials before class. The final grade is determined by (1) mid-term exam (30%); (2) class participation (attendance: 10%, presentation and participation in class discussion: 10%); and (3) final exam (50%).
